

Calling

Broken hearts, empty eyes

Cry for love, cry for life.

Where is hope, where is justice and truth

In this world, so full of lies?

How will they know there is solace for pain,

Til those already rescued take up the burden

For those still in chains?

May our lives of love always show,

And our words of hope let others know

How the Father's heart cries out:

Calling all His children, calling for His children.

There is hope; there is justice and truth;

And love, to bring you to life.

For there is One who loves you more than you know;

Beyond all that we need or want, He offers life

Surpassing all our dreams.

So our lives of love can always show,

And our words of hope let others know

How the Father's heart cries out:

Calling all His children, calling for His children.