THE T@ble

COOK, EAT, TALK, TOGETHER

Welcome to the T@ble – where all are invited!

The T@ble is a space for the community to gather together while sharing a meal, conversation and life.

It aims to bring people together regularly so that relationships can be built by doing life alongside each other.

The T@ble is an easy and natural way to share the love of Jesus, create faith pathways and help build healthy communities for the members of your local area.

If you have a space where people can sit down and eat together you can run this program! If you have a space where people can cook together even better!

Choose a time and day that suits you and let the invitations be extended to all that are interested in joining.

Getting up the play

① About The T@ble:

Vision:

To create a space where genuine community can be formed.

Values:

All are welcome.

Everyone is involved in the preparation.

Everyone has a voice and is heard.

Everyone is treated with dignity and value is placed upon them.

Friendships are formed.

Everyone makes a contribution to the cost of the evening. Those with more, support those with less.

This is not welfare, it's family. It's not a handout but a hand-up.

The gathering runs regularly and people are invited to continue the journey. This is not a one off meal but a community forming engagement.

Excellence in meal, table setting and environment.

Mission:

The T@ble strives to create an environment that encourages connection and togetherness. It aims to help tackle the growing impacts of isolation and loneliness in our communities, caused by the increased disconnection of family and the breakdown of traditional communities.

Strategy:

1. To create an experience centered around food that invites people to share in the whole process - from preparation to enjoying and cleaning up.
2. To encourage life giving conversation over the table that enables people to connect and explore some of life's bigger questions.
3. To facilitate friendships that reach beyond The T@ble gatherings and into the journey of life together.

Measurement:

- ✓ People meeting regularly at The T@ble gatherings.
- ✓ Friendships formed and meeting beyond the gathering occurs.
- ✓ People reporting a greater sense of belonging and care.
- ✓ People being engaged in the evening, both in terms of food preparation and conversation.
- ✓ People sharing life at a meaningful level.

② Team role descriptions

*The T@ble requires a committed team of 3-6 people.
The responsibilities of each role can be seen below.*

Facilitator:

1. Responsible for the evening.
2. Go-to person for any issues.
3. Creates a positive team and encourages them in all they bring.
4. Ensures all the below roles are filled and understood.
5. Follows up any needs that were raised and require further action.

Foodie:

1. Confirms the meal and prints out the menus for the evening.
2. Ensures ingredients are purchased and cooking equipment is available.
3. Lays out the preparation stations and explains the stages to the guests.
4. Assigns people to their preparation task.
5. Oversees and directs the meal preparation.

MC:

1. Ensures appropriate music is on.
2. Welcomes people and outlines the flow of the evening.
3. Moves people to the tables once the meal is served.
4. Collects the money from participants by the end of the night.

5. Ensures everyone knows they have a 'pass card' and they do not have to answer every question that is part of the T@ble Talk.
6. Invites people to return to the next T@ble event and shared any announcements or engagement opportunities.

T@ble Talk Presenter:

1. Prepares the table conversation (this may be the Pass The Salt Cards or something that helps encourage conversation.)
2. Prepares the 5-6 minute T@ble Talk. These talks are centred around 'life issues', and are aimed at kickstarting conversation at each table.
3. As a T@ble Talk Presenter, make sure you have read through the talks. It would be good to add some personal stories/anecdotes to make the talks even more engaging.
4. Prints out T@ble Talk questions for post talk discussion.

Table host:

Each table needs to have their own table host

1. Ensures that the conversation is shared, positive and no one is left out.
2. Creates an inviting space to share around the table.
3. Brings to the facilitator any issues that were raised in conversation that may require follow up.

③ Menu / food ideas

There are 4 sample menus available in the appendix (page 7):

- Mexican
- Asian Inspiration
- Sliders
- Skewers

PLEASE NOTE: Recipes require adjusting to accommodate the number of people you have attending.

④ Cooking equipment

The attached menus only require the below key cooking equipment:

- Hot plate/ BBQ
- 2 x gas cook tops
- A soda stream
- Food processor

⑤ Room set-up

It is important to understand that the set-up of the room has a voice. Consider the environment you are creating in the room as you put it together.

The food and table should represent a home or restaurant quality meal; if possible, avoid serving meals on disposable plates or using plastic cutlery.

Have some conversation starters present on the tables, a resource such as Pass the Salt (available here: link) is a great way to break the ice and get people talking.

Table sizes should ideally range from 5-10 people. These numbers ensure that everyone can be engaged without it being too daunting.

Ensure that WHS and OHS requirements are considered in the set up of the room.

⑥ Health and safety

Someone present at the gathering must have a food handling certificate.

Everyone must wear gloves and have their hair pulled back during the preparation process.

Cafe and Restaurant Industry: Hazard identification checklist

Essential Guide to Work Health and Safety for Volunteers

Additionally, encourage people to:

- Play or watch sport together
- Go out for tea/coffee/hot chocolate together
- Go to a park or go for a walk as a group
- Hire a movie together or go to a movie theatre

There are heaps of other creative ideas that you can encourage people to do.

From meeting together to talk around the tables as we eat, we can build friendships that go beyond just this one off gathering. When people are meeting up beyond the facilitated time we have COMMUNITY!!

⑦ Group dynamics

It is crucial that each table has a table host, this is a vital role for the evening. The table host is there to help people feel comfortable and to facilitate discussion.

The MC should be sure to explain that everyone has a metaphorical "Pass Card". This means for the discussion around the tables people are welcome to "pass" or not to answer. The group dynamics that we are looking to create are not a pressure situation, but a welcoming, open and inviting environment.

⑧ Community Building

Creating genuine community requires regular communication.

It is critical that communication takes place between gatherings.

You can help facilitate community building beyond The T@ble gatherings by:

- Identifying a team member to contact attendees - send a thank you message for coming to the last T@ble gathering, another message to invite attendees to the next event.

⑨ T@ble Talks

The talk outlines provided (included in the appendix) touch on some general 'life topics'. These talks will optimally go for about 5-6 minutes and will lead into table discussion around the provided questions or just general discussion as a result of ideas raised in the talk.

The first talk provided is very helpful for setting the vibe of The T@ble nights. For future events you can pick and choose from the other suggested topics or you are more than welcome to create your own.

It would be good to have read, prepared and even added some personalisation to the outlines.

⑩ Conversation starters.

Pass the Salt cards can be used as conversation starters over the meal.

Order Pass the Salt cards using this link: salvationarmy.org.au/passthesalt/

“Having at The T@ble - Meeting Strangers

How do you go with meeting new people, meeting strangers?

Do you think we live in a society that is becoming less trusting and more suspicious of people we don't know?

Meeting strangers is a bit daunting and takes a bit of trust, perhaps more than ever these days.

Have you ever tried saying “good morning” to someone when you jump on the train or bus in the morning when heading to work? People generally look at you as if you are from another planet. And that's just saying “good morning”, imagine if you tried to strike up a whole conversation!

Do you remember in the old, old, old days, telephones just had bells when they rang? You never knew who was calling until you picked up the phone and said “Hello”. Now-a-days, I don't know about you; but the ability to know who is calling me on my phone makes me much less likely to answer it. If it's an unknown number, a stranger, I am much more unlikely to answer.

It's not just meeting people in person, or answering the phone, the disconnect we have from people is happening online too. We have a (sometimes rightly) placed fear of meeting people online. Sharing our information has become potentially dangerous and so people shy away from it completely.

Our mantra has become

“If I don't know you, I am wary of you.”

Maybe we have listened for too long or taken too far what we were told as kids – “don't talk to strangers.”

What is it that is making us afraid of strangers?

Does this happen to you?

When I am watching a movie, I often am sitting judging the characters and trying to work out which one of them who initially seems nice has an ulterior motive and is going to eventually turn out to do something bad...

(If possible insert an example of a time when you watched a movie and thought someone was going to be evil/turn out bad, but actually had no ulterior motive.)

So why have we become so afraid of meeting new people?
Why are we so quick to assume that people have an ulterior or scary motive if we don't know them?

What makes you scared of people you don't know?

- Do you think it is because they are different to you?
- Do you think it is because you are scared of what they might ask from you, what the cost on your time, energy or money might be?
- Are you concerned about what they might do to you?
- Are you afraid that they might damage your social standing?
- Or do you simply have a lack of time? Are you too busy?

Regardless of what your reasoning is, the fear of strangers is robbing us of life and connection.

We ALL need people in our lives. We were created as relational beings and we thrive when we are known, loved, celebrated by others and do likewise in return.

As Christians we believe we were created this way by God. He is a relational God who stepped down into our world when we were alone and isolated and offered us relationship with Him. It is no surprise that when we reach out and invest into relationships with others that we feel, in one sense, a divine connection and completeness.

Statistics are showing us that isolation and loneliness are reaching epidemic proportions in our culture and we are seeing the physical, mental and societal costs of not connecting with others. This is a sad fact for our society.

So, if you are new here tonight, if you don't know me or others, can I say thank you! Thank you for breaking the cultural norm, the fear of meeting strangers, and meeting us, bringing and giving of yourself in this space, in conversation and food preparation.

You may be wondering: what are we selling? The answer is nothing. We don't want anything from you, we simply want you to come, gather with us, meet and create community. We want this to be a safe space for people to share who they are and what they believe. So I hope you feel welcome and celebrated and safe.

I do have one hope. I hope you come back and make this a regular community of people with whom you do life.

Considering we have been preparing, cooking and eating together let me share with you a food-image about life.

When you tell your story of life there are a few key ingredients:

- We talk about our experiences – “I went here, did this, saw that.”
- And we add to those experiences people – “who I met, who I shared it with.”

There is no doubt that our lives are richer when others enter them. So to, are our lives richer when we enter the lives of others. Sometimes we share the experiences of life, other times we are called to take care of people or require others to take care of us. What is known to be true though, is that life becomes small when it's just me!

William Booth, founder of The Salvation Army, sent a telegram in the 1800s to people in The Salvation Army to inspire them to live full lives.

Back then you paid for your telegrams by the number of words included in the telegram.

So Booth sent one single word. A word that would inspire them to live a full life. And you know what it was...

OTHERS

William Booth's telegram, as well as his life, was inspired and shaped by his hero, Jesus. Jesus also shared a simple yet profound message for living abundantly – live for others, particularly widows and orphans, those who are alone, marginalised and in need.

When Jesus was speaking to the people gathered around him, he told them: "I have come that they may have life, and have it to the full." (John 10:10)

Jesus shows us how to live abundantly, he shows the way to live in relationship with God and with each other. Forgiving, loving, showing mercy, and caring for anyone and everyone.

I think if William Booth sent an email to people today, he would first use more words, but it would probably say something like...

"Break from the fear of sharing life with others, be in rich relationships, stay connected, love and care for each other."

But then again, maybe the original telegram is all that we really need to hear – OTHERS!

My hope is that this gathering, will stop us from being robbed by the fear of strangers. That we would become bold to make connections and to live connected lives as we journey together.

Your table hosts have some questions that we can discuss over dessert! So enjoy (insert whichever dessert you have made for the evening here) and keep enjoying one another's company.

Questions:

What is it that stops you from connecting with people you don't know?

Personally, what are the key reasons that you need people in your life in order to live a full life?

How do you respond to William Booth's (or Jesus') focus on life being about others?

If life was really about others, and not 'self' like our society seems to say to us, what are a few things that you would do differently?

“How busy should we be?”

Tonight, I thought we would reflect, contemplate and discuss a word that I think is shaping our lives.

The word – “BUSY”.

If I asked how busy you are on a scale of 1-10, how would you respond? (Pause, let people reflect.)

Our greetings have been reframed by our business. We say: ‘Hi, how are you? Busy?’

It’s as if being busy is a mark of success. If you’re not busy then what are you?

But I guess the question we need to ask is “does living a busy life really mean I am living a successful life?” Or is a busy life actually an unsuccessful life?

More often than not if someone says they are busy, they really mean they are stressed, tired, strung-out, worried, have too much going on and are over worked. It is such a shame that these descriptors have become our society’s modern markers of success.

To be busy has a COST. The cost is what gets neglected in order to maintain busy.

There’s a saying “stop and smell the roses.” It means take time to smell, to engage with, to reflect upon the beauty of life. Have we become TOO BUSY for rose smelling?

Socrates (a Greek Philosopher who lived in the 4th century) said “The unexamined life is not worth living.”

Are we too busy to examine our lives?

Are we too busy for what really matters?

Are we losing what’s really important?

It seems that being busy is not something that is new to modern society.

Francis de Sales was a Bishop of Geneva. He lived in the 1500’s.

He wrote ‘when you begin to talk more slowly, walk more slowly, eat more slowly, then it may be possible that we can begin to do something about your spiritual life’.

The cost of being ‘busy’ was clearly something discussed even hundreds of years ago.

Steven Spielberg the great filmmaker said

“Technology can be our best friend, and technology can also be the biggest party pooper of our lives. It interrupts our own story, interrupts our ability to have a thought or a daydream, to imagine something wonderful, because we’re too busy bridging the walk from the cafeteria back to the office on the cell phone”.

How often do you fill every minute of spare time in your life by pulling out your phone to text, call, watch Netflix or scroll aimlessly through social media?

(Insert a personal story if you have one about a time when you just sat and were still rather than busy, and how this was not wasted time, but valuable time.)

How much of the richness of life awaits us in stillness when the distraction of BUSY is stripped away?

In the Bible there is a book called Psalms and in it are many songs and poems written to God and about life. In Psalm 46, the author says the following “Be still and know that I am God.” (46:10)

When I reflect on this statement the following questions challenge me:

- Can I really explore my spiritual side without the stillness of contemplation?
- Can I really know what’s going on for me, inside me, without the stillness of listening?
- Can I live a grateful life without the stillness of reflection?
- Can I live an adventurous life without the stillness of dreaming?
- Can I live a life attentive to the needs of others without the stillness of noticing?
- Can I live a peaceful life, a life free of worry, anxiety and stress, without the stillness of knowing hope.

It is worth us pondering, what is the “badge of a successful life?”.

Could it be stillness, not busyness?

Let’s chat more about this over our tables whilst we eat our delicious dessert!

Questions:

Where do you find stillness?

Is stillness a priority in your life?

What tools of distraction keep you busy and rob you of stillness?

How much is BUSY robbing you of the things that matter in life?

What is one thing you could change to find stillness in your life?

(Question Printouts section on page 68)

“Motivation

What comes to mind when you hear the word “motivation”?

Some clever people have come up with quotes that can help us think about it.

- Napoleon Hill an American motivational speaker and author says that - “Desire is the starting point of all achievement.” – So motivation is a desire...
- Stephen Covey the author of the book 7 Habits of Highly Successful People says that “Motivation is a fire from within”.
- Mum’s often say “I wish I could motivate my kids to clean their room!”
- And an old English proverb says “where there is a will...there is a way”.

Motivation seems to be this powerful feeling that occurs within us, infuses with our thoughts and produces action.

I think everything we do (and don’t do) has a form, a story, a motivation or desire behind it.

I’m not sure there is anything we do in life that if we stopped to consider the “why” we could not identify some motivating force behind it.

When we take a breath that is because our brain knows we need oxygen, so our lungs are motivated to inhale by the body’s desire to live.

We hear stories of people who are caught out in extreme weather conditions and they are still alive because of their desire to see a family member again.

The government tries to motivate people to stop smoking using a whole range of tactics, but primarily fear.

Fear is a motivator that can stop us from doing things that we would want to do. Sometimes we are stopped from doing things that are bad for us. Other times we are stopped by fear to do good things.

What other motivators are there out there?

- Commercials use the fear of missing out on a good deal to get you to buy things.
- Funeral insurance plays on guilt as a motivator.
- We are motivated by not wanting to get punished by the law and so we stick to the speed limit.
- We are motivated by a celebrity or someone we know because we want to be like them. (We can be George Clooney if we drink Nespresso coffee right?!)
- A lack of motivation, or misplaced motivation (also known as laziness) can be a motivator too, can't it. I find that I am constantly motivated by laziness, like choosing not to go to the gym when I know it would be good for me.
- At work we can be motivated by interesting work, feeling valued and part of a team. Bosses and work-places are always trying to work out what motivates their people to do the best work possible! What motivates you at work?
- Our past experiences motivate us.
- Our morals and what we believe to be right and wrong motivate all our decisions.

There are always going to be both positive and negative motivators in our lives.

Can you think of other things that motivate you and the decisions you make?

Personally, for me as a Christian, the Bible and what it teaches is a very strong motivator for me. I want to live in a way that pleases God, so that motivates me and shapes my actions.

I've mentioned so many things that are motivators, but research coming out now is saying that identity is the biggest motivator for what we do, even more than fear or punishment.

We live in a world that is all about me.

"Self" is enthroned and placed at the centre and individual freedom is so highly prized that the parameters of what is acceptable have now been shifted to be "as long as it is right for me, then it is fine."

Another major key motivator is love.

I don't know if you have heard of a guy named David from the Bible. He was the King of Israel and he wrote this down about his relationship with God:

"When you open my ears and speak deeply to me, I become your willing servant, your prisoner of love for life. I delight to fulfill your will, my God, for your living words are written upon the pages of my heart." (Psalm 40)

When I read scripture I see that God sets people free from fear, law and punishment by declaring that everyone who accepts Him as the Lord of their lives is forgiven and accepted forever based on what Jesus did on our behalf. He entirely removes the motivators of law, punishment, and fear and speaks exclusively to the motivators of identity and love.

Your wonderful Table Hosts have some conversation starters based on what we have looked at tonight. Enjoy discussing them over dessert!

Questions:

What are some of the motivators in your life?

Can you think of motivators that were not mentioned?

What are the thoughts and the voices that motivate you?

How much are law, punishment, fear, love and identity motivators for you? In what areas of your life do these things motivate you?

Do you want to change any of your motivators? How might you do that?

“When Life is Lumpy

We all know that life is lumpy. You can't smooth sail through life, there are bumps along the way.

But not all lumps are the same!

Some are problems and some inconveniences, and knowing the difference is critical.

There is a saying - “don't sweat the small stuff.”

It is interesting that in our western culture we try to remove all the lumps from our lives.

We strive for a 'happy place' where everything is in its right place

We strive to make sure everything works perfectly.

We want to make sure we have all we need ... really... more than we need.

But this perfect place that we try to create – this place does not exist.

And if we do happen to create it for a few moments, it can't be maintained.

This perfect idea we have in our heads, it's not life – it's a Coke commercial, it's what advertisers put before us, as an idea of a complete life.

Advertising tells us time and time again, all you need is this product and you'll be complete. But it's a lie.

The reality of our lives is that we don't live in a vacuum.

No matter how hard we work at making our lives unlumpy, people enter our world and smooth sailing turns to lumpy seas.

BUT HERE is the important question – do you really think that our lives are richest outside the lumps?

If we aim to remove all the lumps from our lives, we will probably also try to avoid being with other people who are going through lumps, we would avoid their lumpyness.

Jesus says “I have come to give you abundant life”. And many people interpret this as the ‘happy life’... but then he also says “I did not come to rescue you from suffering and hardship.” The fact is that following Jesus, and the way He wants us to live, will make our lives lumpy. This is because Jesus calls us to love people who, like us, have lumpy lives at times.

Jesus’ call to love others is NOT a call from lumpiness, but a call to jump right into that lumpiness alongside others.

Abundant life is not found in smooth sailing, it’s not the removal of lumps, but knowing how to live abundantly (by that I mean richly, whole, with integrity, honestly, with tears and joy and hope) as we navigate through the lumps.

Listen to this passage from a book of the Bible written by a guy called James:

“When it seems as though you are facing nothing but difficulties see it as an invaluable opportunity to experience the greatest joy that you can! For you know that when your faith is tested it stirs up power within you to endure all things. And then as your endurance grows even stronger it will release perfection into every part of your being until there is nothing missing and nothing lacking.” (James 1:2-4 TPT)

James is saying in this passage that the difficulties, the lumps of life, stir up power within us to endure and endurance shapes us into wholeness.

Eleanor Roosevelt said - “People grow through experience if they meet life honestly and courageously. This is how character is built.”

Think about the lumps in your life. Think about how you approach them. Is it with dread and fear, or can you start a journey towards seeing them as opportunities?

Let’s get our dessert!

Then we can spend some time chatting together at our tables about the questions.

Questions:

How do you handle life when it gets lumpy?

Are you good at determining what’s an inconvenience and what’s a problem, and dealing with them appropriately?

What is your emotional response to life when it’s lumpy?

What is your inner dialogue about your life that runs round your head when life gets lumpy?

What do you think about the idea that the lumps of life build in us character?

(Question Printouts section on page 68)

“Feelings

How are we feeling tonight? Have you ever noticed that we cannot STOP feeling – we may not be able to put into words always what we are feeling, but the fact that we ARE feeling never stops.

Feelings are our emotional response to the experiences we encounter. You ONLY ever feel based on stimulus. There is always a WHY to a feeling.

A “feeling” can be defined as - an emotional state or reaction.

Neuroscientist Antonia Damasio states that feelings are “mental experiences of body states” or our conscious recognition of our senses. This means that as an external stimulus occurs – the brain interprets the physical experience or reaction into an emotion – a feeling.

Take meeting someone scary in a dark corner;

I am threatened

I experience fear

And then I feel horror.

We have our five senses (smell, touch, taste, hearing and seeing) and these are how our physical being interprets the world we encounter. Feelings are how our emotions respond to the world we encounter.

What are some feelings that you can feel?

Call them out....

(Pause and leave time for people to respond)

Did you know that there are over 300 different types of feelings!

And we were not really taught these were we?

Feelings are not like a language. You didn't go to "How to Feel" classes when you were a child, in fact you were born feeling.

Feelings are universal across culture and time. We feel in Australia today just the same as the people 'felt' in the time of The Roman Empire. Our feelings are not based on, or shaped by, where we live, or when we are alive in the history of the world or the culture in which we live. They are interwoven into the very fabric of every person, they are part of our created being.

Have you ever had someone say to you; "stop feeling that," or 'you shouldn't feel that way.' We talk like this but in reality, feelings don't really have an on-off switch do they?

It's really interesting to note that there are some feelings that we run passionately towards and others we run desperately away from. Many of us will go to any length to experience, or even avoid, certain feelings. But, we can't control the emotional responses we have - they just come.

Gustave Flaubert a French novelist from the 1800s said:
"One can be the master of what one does, but never of what one feels."

Let me state two things about feelings:

1. You can't avoid feelings (try as you like)
2. Feelings are powerful

So what do we do with these feelings?

We are told in the Bible that God has designed us to have feelings and knowing them, and being in-touch with them, helps us to know where our heart is.

We see lots of different types of feelings in the Bible. We see delight in the Psalms as the psalmist looks at creation and marvels at God. We see the affection Paul has for those who he has shared the good news of Jesus with. We see Peter have fear when he is questioned just before Jesus death. We see Jesus angry at the way people are extorting people for money in the temple and we see joy, in countless circumstances, time and time again.

Feelings are powerful forces.

We need to make sure that we are wise people who are not driven solely by our feelings but who use our feelings as a guide. We don't want to try to banish or ignore our feelings because they are good gifts given to us, but we do need to make sure we control them.

The book of Proverbs in the Bible, which is considered the Book of Wisdom says this about people who are ruled by their feelings.

"Like an open city with no defenses is the man with no check on his feelings." (Proverbs 25:28)

What are your feelings on feelings?

Your table host has some questions to discuss as a group, so grab some dessert and enjoy your table discussions!

Questions:

What are the most powerful feelings you experience?

Do you think that all feelings are good? Why or why not?

What do your feelings tell you?

Do you think you should make decisions based on your feelings?

Do you let your feelings define you? "I am ....."

Do you use your feelings as a barometer on your life?

(Question Printouts section on page 68)

“Purpose

The wonderful Audrey Hepburn once said:

“The most important thing is to enjoy your life, to be happy, it's all that matters.”

It seems to me that our culture relentlessly chases after the ever illusive “happy place.” Have you noticed that basically everything that is ever advertised is screaming to us “THIS is what will make you happy!”

Almost every advertiser claims is:

“by having this product, you will be able to grasp the illusive ‘happy place’”.

Happiness in our world seems very tightly linked to purpose. If you work out your purpose and go for it – you will be happy.

Have a listen to these quotes about purpose, do any of them ring true for you?

- “Don’t ask what the world needs. Ask what makes you come alive and go for it.” Anonymous
- “The purpose of life is a life of purpose”.
Robert Byrne (American Chess grandmaster)
- “He who has a why to live can bear almost any how.”
Friedrich Nietzsche (German Philosopher in 1800s)
- “People without a vision perish.” (Proverbs 29:18)

How important is having a purpose in life to you?

If someone asked you “what is your purpose in life” do you think you could articulate it?

Does your life’s purpose shape your decisions?

The Bible has quite a bit to say about purpose.

Jesus says the purpose of your life is to follow Him.

In the Book of Luke, which records one of the historical accounts of Jesus life, Luke records Jesus as saying: “Deny yourself and take up your cross daily and follow me.” (Luke 9:23)

Jesus calls people to three ideas that are really different to the self-fulfilment and “pursuit of happiness” ideas that permeate all of our culture.

He says:

1) Deny yourself                      2) Sacrifice                      3) Submit.

This is the complete opposite to the message of today’s society.

The focus of this sacrifice He has called us to is best summed up as: 1) Love God and 2) Love others.

In the Book of Matthew, another historical record of Jesus; life He is recorded as saying:

“Love the Lord your God with every passion of your heart, with all the energy of your being, and with every thought that is within you.’ This is the great and supreme commandment. And the second is like it in importance: ‘You must love your friend in the same way you love yourself.’” (Mathew 22:37-40)

Imagine a life of purpose that is for others, to follow Jesus, to love God and others. It seems odd – but in my experience a live lived like this is a life that has ULTIMATE PURPOSE!!!

Anais Nin, a French American novelist in 1900s said that our “Life shrinks or expands in proportion to one’s courage.”

Do we have enough courage to shape lives against the tide of the world and the culture that surrounds us and to live a life of purpose for others?

Questions:

What are some of the most important things in your life?

- Now?
- In the next 12 months?
- In 5 years’ time?
- In your whole lifetime?

How would you articulate your life’s purpose?

How do you respond to the call to deny self and to sacrifice for others and submit your life to God?

How much are we shaped by our culture and not our convictions?

Do you think it is courage that we need to live a purposeful life?
