

From the outset, they focused on those who were hurting the most: those tossed aside by society, trapped in destructive cycles, or living in poverty.

After 18 years, the mission was expanded to include organised social work.

Following Jesus' example, they wanted to walk alongside people in their struggles.

